

Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 16 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Fine and very warm, increasing risk of thunderstorms by evening.

Today:

Dry with light winds and sunny spells, sunshine possibly becoming hazy later in the afternoon. Very warm or hot with strong sunlight. Possibly becoming cloudy toward the Peak District later. Maximum temperature 29 deg C (84 deg F).

Tonight:

A dry start this evening, remaining warm. Thundery showers with hail and gusty winds pushing north across the Midlands shortly after midnight. Showers locally torrential in places. Minimum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Thursday:

The area of heavy thundery showers with hail and gusty winds will continue to move north on Thursday morning. Becoming mainly dry but probably cloudy in the afternoon. Warm. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

Further bands of heavy thundery showers will move northwards at times during Friday and Sunday, but with dry and occasionally sunny periods on Saturday afternoon and later on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.